Madison: most segregated in area

'Nothing natural about segregation'

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

When Madison Mayor John Bellcoff was a child growing up, he and the other children of East European descent knew their place — the north end of town away from the majority "up-towners."

After dark, Bellcoff said, they didn't dare cross Sixth Street.

On Sunday night, the area's drug store, even the library, were off limits to everyone whose name ended in "off," "vich," "ish," "ack" or any other "non-American" syllable.

It wasn't right, he said, but that's the way it was: not just the town, but everyone accepted it.

No matter how good you were or how hard you worked, if you weren't an "up-towner" the future was limited to the north side of town.

Then one day George Thomas, the band director and physical education teacher at the high school, took Bellcoff and the kids from his neighborhood aside.

He told them they had proved they were good students, good athletes and had the potential to be anything they wanted to be in life. Why he asked, were they willing to let the "up-towners" who were no better than them dictate how they lived?

Bellcoff said he had forgotten that advice and encouragement that what you are should not define who you can become.

"I would hope that I, and all of our modern community leaders, are giving that same kind of encouragement to children who feel excluded," Bellcoff said.

"George Thomas told us, 'You have a right to be a part of the community as much as everyone else.' (See BELLCOFF, Page 8A)

Study finds progress

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

Madison has the dubious distinction of being the most segregated city in the Metro East area, according to a recent Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville study.

But Madison Mayor John Bellcoff said he believes the city is dealing with its problems better than most communities in the area.

And he and County Board member Don Garrett — both former school board members — point to the progress the community's racial and cultural diversity and the fact that Madison schools integrated in 1951. That was more than a decade before school integration became an issue, often a bitter, and forced one — in other St. Louis area communities...

John E. Farley, a professor of sociology and social work, worked for about four months on the study before completing it in July.

The study, based on U.S. Census data, examined the racial composition of St. Louis area towns in both Missouri and Illinois.

He used a formula comparing the racial composition of blocks, or census tracts, to determine the percentage of African-Americans in a community to compute a "segregation index" for each place.

The index ranges from zero to 100, with zero representing no segregation and 100 representing total segregation.

The study found Madison had a 1990 segregation index of 86.7, second only to Webster Groves, Mo., with a segregation index in 1990 of 88.6.

Crime reports to stress details

By Bob State
Staff writer

Whether or not it was raining at the time of an obscene telephone call is apparently important to the Illinois State Police and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Local law enforcement agencies are being forced to comply with strict new crime reporting standards adopted by state and federal agencies.

Local taxpayers are expected to pick up the tab, but Alderman Tom Candler, chairman of the Granite City Police Committee, thinks the state and federal governments should provide funding to implement the mandatory program.

The new standards — the National Incident-Based Reporting System (NIBRS) — require police departments throughout Illinois to report to the state the time and much information as was previously required. Sgt. Terry May of the Granite City Police Department said.

The NIBRS information is used by state and federal agencies to compile a Uniform Crime Report (UCR) each year. Some might say the mandatory crime reporting system, which must be implemented by Jan. 1, is itself a crime — theft of public funds.

It will cost the city of Granite City about $15,000 to upgrade its police department's computer system to comply with the new crime reporting standards adopted by the state police and FBI, Granite City Police Chief Don Knight said.

Smaller police departments, with tighter budgets but less crime, will apparently not be hit as hard as Granite City, local officials said.

Chef Chet Ballew of the Pontoon Beach Police Department said his department had to purchase new computer equipment to comply with the new standards, at a cost of about $800.

Aviation program may move

By Jim Haverstick
Staff writer

Belleville Area College officials are considering consolidating the pilot training and aviation programs to one airport in the Metro East.

Trustee Mark Levy, who has asked administrators to consider consolidating the aviation maintenance program as well as the pilot training program to one of the three airports used by the college. The airports being considered are Parks Airport in St. Jakob, Schaeffer's Metro-East Airport in St. Jakob, and Belleville Airport in Belleville.

The aviation maintenance and aviation electronics programs are taught at the Granite City Campus while the pilot training program is taught at three different airports, said college President Joe Cimino.

He added that college administrators have talked about consolidating its aviation programs for years.

"In fact the FAA has recommended we move them all to the same location for years now."

The location is much more favorable. There is better access than the Granite City site for most of our students.

— Mark Levy
BAC trustee

Cipri said. There are no definite plans for a move at this time. Cipri said the board is discussing the consolidation to determine if it would be more efficient and more convenient for students.

Levy said that Bi-State and Metro East were the top choices at the time.

Two years ago a study recommended that the aviation and avionics move to the Parks Airport

Record-breaking

Area voter registration is 'incredible' this year

Local residents are registering to vote in record numbers this year, according to election officials in both Madison and St. Clair counties.

"It's absolutely incredible," said Madison County Clerk Evelyn Bowles, who has worked in numerous elections over a 40-year career. "I've never seen anything to compare with it."

In St. Clair County, County Clerk Janice Delaney is predicting that turnout for the Nov. 3 general election could be a record-breaker since 10,500 new voters have registered this year.

"People are really pouring in to register on their own. This is going to be a record election," she said. "It's so much higher now and the interest is so great."

Bowles predicted the Madison County registration total will top 136,000 this week.

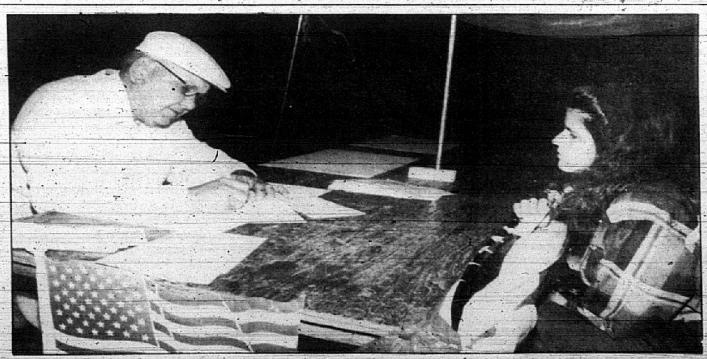

At the time of the last presidential election in 1988, 130,540 Madison County residents were registered to vote.

The county had 132,972 registered voters as of Friday, up 6,255 compared with the 126,717 who were eligible to vote in the March primary election.

There are many first-time registrants, and they're not all just turned 18 either, Bowles said. "People say they are looking for a change."

Requests for absentee ballots also have been heavy, she said.

Forum on water rate hike

Customers of Illinois American Water Company will have two opportunities to comment on the proposed rate hike which could increase residential water bills an average of $5 a month.

The Illinois Commerce Commission will hold a public forum at 7 p.m. Monday at the Granite City Township Hall, 2060 Delmar Ave. A second forum will take place Oct. 26 at Belleville West High School.

The water company hopes to raise $10.5 million, or 20 percent, through the increase. The company has said it needs more funds to operate because of increased labor, group insurance, depreciation and tax costs.

More than $10.7 million also will be invested to improve operations in the Interurban District as the company replaces and installs more water lines.

The company would vary among different types of users, including fire protection and industrial customers, the company has said. The overall rate increases would vary between 14 percent and 28 percent.

• Study

On the other hand, Farley said, in 1990, Madison's "phenomenally high" segregation index of 96.1, so progress is being made, "albeit very slowly."

Bellcoff said he thinks it is unfair to the city to look at just a slice out of time and not take into account where it has been and where it is going.

Farley said that he has had problems with segregation, but we have been dealing with them as well as any other community in the area and better than most.

Bellcoff said his goal, and he believes the goal of most Madison citizens, is to keep and attract good citizens who will bring to the city the skills, strengths and experiences from a wide spectrum of ethnic and cultural backgrounds — so that Madison, already a good community, will be an even better community in the future.

Garrett said he is open to the change in the segregation index in the last 10 years and hopes it will prove to be a long-term pattern.

"Somewhere we've got to come together," Garrett said. "We have a tremendous future ahead of us if we can put past problems behind us and move ahead."

From 1980 to 1990, according to the study, the percentage of African-Americans in Madison dropped from 21.1 percent to 21.1 percent, a trend, Farley said.

"That would tend to indicate whites are still moving into Madison," Farley said. "If we look at what was happening in the areas when blacks began moving in 20 to 30 years ago, rather than seeing mixed neighborhoods develop we see a very rapid turnover from all white to all black."

As a result, Farley said, cities like Venice and East St. Louis have an African-American majority, but don't have a very high segregation index.

"What that means is that in Venice and East St. Louis what whites remain all live in the same place," Farley said.

"Typically, when blacks began moving into a neighborhood, residents began to fear the neighborhood would become all black and leave, so it becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy. Fearing the neighborhood would become black, whites wouldn't move in, and as a result, their fears were ultimately realized."

A positive side of the 1990 study, Farley said, is an indication that the rapid racial turnarounds are no longer taking place and that, while neighborhoods are changing, more are staying integrated.

"You could be pessimistic and think that the economic (economy) is bad, people are breaking and just can't afford to move," Farley said.

Farley said he hopes Farley is right. If past practices were continued, Garrett said, Madison would remain predominantly African-American within the next four to five years.

The last thing in the world I want is an all-black Madison," Garrett said. "But when you start thinking about moving people of fame, when it finally breaks through, it floods. If that is allowed to happen here, it could have extreme consequences."

Garrett said he fears that a fear of some sort of massive invasion by African-Americans worries many homeowners who have serious investments in the community.

In some areas, Garrett said, that fear has already forced some landlords to rent to less than desirable people or very low income from outside the area who have become a big part of the city's illegal drug and crime problem.

"It's unfortunate, but we're now paying the price for years of institutionalized segregation," Garrett said.

"It's not only a slow change that would have stabilized the neighborhoods, now we have the perception that the movement of blacks into Madison is happening now fast and it's overwhelming a lot of homeowners."

Garrett said he takes heart in the improvement and changing attitudes reflected in the study.

He said he hopes Madison will be able to capitalize on the fact there are more mixed neighborhoods, even if they are only the result of a slow economy.

He hopes the economic rebounds and everyone's property values go up. But I hope we don't use that to exclude one race or the other. I hope the trend of integrated neighborhoods continues," Garrett said.

Overall, the study shows a gradual decline in segregation in most of the Illinois and Missouri towns that Farley examined.

It also found that neighborhoods experienced less racial turnover during the 1980s than during the 1970s.

The decline in segregation is a very slow process, Farley said. "I don't want people to get the wrong idea that there was some huge decrease in segregation."

tion. There was not.

"At a rate of 5 or 6 points change in the segregation index every 10 years, it will take a long time," he said.

Farley said he expects St. Louis areas communities to continue to slowly become less segregated in the future.

He said they have a long way to go to a recent national study found the St. Louis area the 11th most segregated of 311 metropolitan areas in the United States.

"There is a concern that racial polarization is a major problem in the St. Louis area and I think a lot of that polarization is a result of the high level of economic polarization."

In St. Louis, like many older Midwestern industrial cities with large African-American populations, most neighborhoods were almost established when the Fair Housing Law was established in 1968, Farley said.

He said that is one reason the area continues to be highly segregated.

Scott Air Force Base was the least segregated community studied, with a segregation index of 11.6. Edwardsville was in the "moderate" range of segregation with a segregation index of 55.1.

"Areas that are near major military bases, for educational facilities, have some of the lowest segregation rates," Farley said.

The study said a number of communities in the Metro East area, including Granite City, Collinsville, Belleville, O'Fallon, Swansea and Fairview Heights, were all virtually all-white, with less than 5 percent black in 1990. "Most of them are in the areas of 5 to 10 percent black in 1990, so they're all becoming more mixed," Farley said.

Collinsville, Belleville, Centreville, East St. Louis, Glen Carbon, Alton and Venice all were in the "moderately high" level of segregation with index between 72.6 (Alton) and 62.3 (Belleville).

Fairview Heights, O'Fallon, Lebanon, Swansea, Mascoutah, Cahokia, Edwardsville and Washington Park all score in the "moderately high" range of segregation, with rates between 59.5 (Cahokia) and 43.1 (Fairview Heights).

The index is based on a formula comparing the racial composition of blocks and the percentage of African-Americans in a community. The index ranges from zero to 100, with zero representing no segregation and 100 representing total segregation.

Health care fraud

Case of local woman cited at hearing

As America's elderly population grows, so do questions about the credibility of health programs supposedly designed to help them.

Senior citizens are becoming the victims of health care fraud and insurance scams, unnecessary testing, and billing frauds from pharmacists, physicians and nursing homes.

Health care fraud not only affects the elderly. It's a concern affecting all taxpayers," said U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello (D-III.), who is running for re-election against Rep. Jim Oberweis (R-Ill.).

"Health care fraud costs consumers an additional $75 million in higher medical costs. That's about 10 percent of the total spent on health care last year in the U.S."

not used up all her allotted Medicare funds for the year and that she had to return some of the money to her," Cross said.

The items, which consisted of an air mattress costing $60, a gel cushion ($35), an electric blanket ($80) and a folding chair ($55), were overpriced, he pointed to the point that they prompted the investigation by the Chicago Medicare office.

Investigation, Cross found out that the company had obtained an authorization form from his mother's physician stating that she had requested the equipment.

Cross denies that his mother requested the equipment. He said she eventually consented to the arrangement after the annoying phone calls, after assurances that it would be of no cost to her. The case is under investigation at the state level.

In another local case, Bach fell into a nursing home insurance scam involving his mother, the late Regine Bach.

Monie thought she had nursing home insurance until she got to the nursing home, he said.

After his mother was admitted a number of times, Bach and the family began filing claims with the insurance company. Bach would not reveal the company's name; the company refused to identify the problem. The treatment was termed as "custodial care," one of three categories for nursing home care.

"We didn't even know there were three categories of nursing home care," Cross said.

The Bachs won a lawsuit for the bills. However, the company still denies that they ever owed them any money.

"A lot of older people don't have anybody to help them," he said.

"It is my desire to make seniors aware that there are many unscrupulous individuals, health care providers and telephone solicitors who will take advantage of them and the Medicare system," Costello said. "Educating seniors and awareness are effective ways to combat this problem on the individual level."

On the legislative level, Costello said his committee is working on a bill that would simplify a comprehensive package concerning health care that will be easier for individuals to understand, as well as tougher laws that will stop those committing fraudulent acts.

On the legislative level, Costello said his committee is working on a bill that would simplify a comprehensive package concerning health care that will be easier for individuals to understand, as well as tougher laws that will stop those committing fraudulent acts.

While fraudulent practitioners can be fined and their state medical license revoked, the problem still is not solved since they can move to another state and become relicensed.

The issue of health care fraud has added quickly, these unnecessary health care costs for all health care consumers will rise to $100 billion by 1995," Costello said. "The cost of health care is now billions of dollars each year. Dollars that could be used in other areas like health care reform and disease research."

THE LAW AND YOU

By RICK REED
Attorney At Law

Sometimes, individuals contact this office and indicate that they fell on a slippery floor and that they were injured. They then ask if they have been injured in this situation wonder whether they can recover damages from the store owner based on negligence.

Various Illinois cases have decided that the mere waxing or oiling of a floor does not necessarily constitute negligence on the part of the business owner. In order to demonstrate negligence, the evidence will have to show that the waxing or oiling was not properly performed. Illinois Courts, in discussing the waxing or treating of floors by business establishments, have decided that a store owner may treat his floor with wax or oil in a certain manner without incurring liability unless it is shown to be negligent in the materials he used or the manner of applying the substances.

What this means is that testimony that a floor is slick, slippery, or polished is insufficient in and of itself to establish negligence. A recent case involved just such a claim. The plaintiff had fallen on a freshly painted floor that had a "high gloss" finish. Apparently the property owner had applied a fresh coat of paint to a concrete floor, and the injured party testified that he fell as if he had stepped on a "sheet of glass" or an ice rink."

At the close of the plaintiff's case, the trial court granted a motion for directed verdict. This meant that the plaintiff was not even able to get his case to the jury. The Appellate Court held that this action was proper since the only evidence concerning the issue of the defendant's negligence was the testimony that the floor was slick. The court held that the plaintiff presented no evidence that the type of paint used was improper or that the race track was negligent in its selection of paint.

What evidence will be required to establish negligence with regard to a fall on a slippery floor? One Appellate Court in a 1967 case listed some positive acts of a defendant which might give rise to negligence in a case involving a slippery floor. These include applying an excessive amount of wax, applying wax unevenly, or treating part of a floor with wax and leaving another part untreated would be acts which could be construed as negligence.

Partnership will give Madison pupils workplace experience

By Brian Henry
Correspondent

Madison High School and Shell Oil Co. in Wood River have formed a partnership to give students the opportunity to get hands-on experience in the career of their choice.

Shell "adopted" MHS in May of this year and will try to enhance the educational experience at the high school through a series of programs geared toward linking the workplace and the classroom.

The partnership began two years ago at a career choices forum sponsored by Shell Oil at MHS. Madison Principal Robert Mehele said he was impressed with the program and so began a series of conversations between the two groups.

"I guess one thing led to another," said Mehele. "I got a phone call last May requesting me to come to a school meeting and it was there that I was told that we could become partners with Shell. I'm looking forward to it; it should be great."

The Wood River manufacturing complex of Shell has already adopted Roxana High School, where a similar program has been in the works for three years.

After an initial period of time where the two "O's" of the school were addressed, committees from the school and Shell decide what additions need to be made.

Tara Condon, public relations director at Shell, admits the program is still in its infancy, but says this pays off in the long run.

"We see what we can help them with, and in turn, they help us out and what we offer them," Condon said. "We start slow because it's kind of a feeling-out process. It takes time because both sides can agree as to what action to take."

Representatives from Shell and MHS have only met once but there are a number of ideas which are in the works.

The idea appears to have generated the most interest is "career shadowing." In that program, a student is assigned a mentor from Shell who works in the field of the student's prospective occupation.

Mehele and Condon feel that career shadowing could be a curriculum enhancement benefit.

"We have something like that last year where we sent 24 kids to Scott Air Force Base," Mehele said. "It proved to be immensely successful. Shell is going to participate in some career exploration as well, and we hope it is a success," he said.

"By doing the career shadowing, the kids get the opportunity to see how someone in the position they eventually want to get into does their job," Condon said.

"Right now, there aren't many companies that do this, but we really hope it spreads to other places because I think it's a worthwhile program."

There are four Madison graduates in the group from Shell and their familiarity with Madison is a big plus, according to Mehele.

"I think it's a definite plus that they are there," he said. "If they hadn't found people like them to undertake this project, it would not have gone on."

The next scheduled meeting between Shell and MHS is Oct. 16 at the Shell plant.

"They're going to participate in a number of programs during the school year," Mehele said. "They'll provide speakers for us and we'll try to utilize their support. I'm hoping this becomes very successful."

Riverland master plan under study

GODFREY — Tom Ott was 8 years old when he went fishing with his father on the Mississippi River at Alton.

"We fished for catfish and crappie and watched the sunset on the river," Ott said.

He asked the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers during a public workshop last month to keep the river open for fishing.

Corps officials listened to Ott at a workshop to form a new Riverland Master Plan at Lewis and Clark Community College.

The plan will cover 49,400 acres of public land from Alton to Hannibal, Mo.

"We're asking people to tell us their concerns about recreation, environment, wetlands and economic development along the river," said James M. Hill, a corps planner.

The corps plan must strike a balance between commercial development and preservation of the river's natural beauty, said Jerod Bonbrake of Alton.

"The river bluffs along Alton is some of the most beautiful scenery in the country," said Bonbrake, manager of Menetian Harbor Marina at Portage des Sioux, Mo.

"The corps' plan must protect it for future generations to enjoy. We don't want to see wide open commercial development."

The corps has preserved its own wetlands on part of 50 acres of land along the river, Bonbrake said.

"People come to our land to watch the eagles soar over the river," he said.

The corps is trying to complete the master plan in the next three years, Hill said.

Offt, 32, of Spanish Lake in St. Louis County, will never forget the day his father took him on his first fishing trip to Alton.

"The water was blue, majestic and beautiful," he said. "I think we will be able to protect the river land so other children can enjoy wonderful memories with their fathers."

Reject education amendment

Universal public education is a foundation of American democracy. In the absence of an educated electorate, there can be no freedom, no self-government and no society.

Because availability of good public education is fundamental to our lives and our future, providing adequate funding for schools is the responsibility of government.

Watching local school board members sweat blood over budgets this year, there can be no doubt that the schools in Venice, Madison and Granite City could use more money. The local school boards are by no means alone in this struggle; schools across the state have been forced to make cuts.

An education funding crisis looms on the horizon, so no one can question the good intentions of the authors of a proposed Illinois constitutional amendment that would make free schools a "fundamental right" of the people of the state and would give the state government the "preponderant financial responsibility for financing the system of public education." In this case, unfortunately, rather than solving the problem, these good intentions have the likely potential of paving the proverbial road to hell.

Proponents of the amendment say it would take the burden of funding education off the backs of property owners by shifting the primary source of education funding from local property taxes to state revenue sources such as the lottery, sales taxes, income taxes and other sources.

Under the amendment, the proponents say, there would no longer be "poor" and "rich" school districts because the state would make sure that the same amount of money would be spent on every student in every school district. Illinois already has a statewide system of goals and accountability, the proponents say, and the amendment would make sure there is statewide funding to achieve it.

If the amendment passes and if the state legislature writes and passes the appropriate legislation to support the intent and spirit of the amendment, and if the governor signs and follows that legislation, then everything the proponents say is true.

But those are some pretty big ifs.

What if the legislature decides the state's preponderant financial responsibility means controlling the money, not providing it? The state could then create an Office of School Financing to which all education revenue—including local property taxes and federal program grants—would be sent. Disbursements would then be made from that office fund to local districts based on a per-student formula.

What if the governor decides the state's responsibility to make these disbursement payments is a moral one—they must be budgeted—but that actual payments will be reduced or pro-rated to reflect the state's ability, or inability, to balance the overall state budget?

What if, in response to this, the legislature mandates that all school districts raise local property taxes, even those school districts which—based on the per-student formula—would ultimately get the same, or even lower, disbursement payments from the state after the tax increase?

As far-fetched as this scenario may be, it would probably be constitutional under the proposed amendment. Because no one has ever presented even an outline of proposed supporting legislation for the amendment, who can say this scenario is impossible?

Sportswriter Grantland Rice once pointed out that, while the Bible is undoubtedly correct when it says that the race is always to the swift, the fight always to the strong, that is, however, the way to bet.

While it may be highly unlikely that the amendment would ever become the blank check its opponents claim it would be, there is no doubt that the amendment's potential for harm is tremendous. In recent years, the state has handed local governments a myriad of broken funding promises and late or reduced reimbursement payments.

Even knowing the amendment's equally tremendous potential for good, gambling that the state's legislative and executive branches would do the right thing and, as a result, local school districts would reap great benefits, is a long shot at best.

The proposed constitutional amendment to Section I of Article X (Education) is a bet we would be ill-advised to make at stakes we cannot afford to lose. Voters should reject the amendment in November.

Don't ridicule Gov. Clinton on draft

TO THE EDITOR:

This is a comment on Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton and the (military) draft.

I am one of the many mothers who had sons of draft age during the Vietnam war.

My oldest son's number was called. He served his time and came home a hero. I was thankful.

When the youngest became 19, my husband and I were so relieved when his number did not come up.

I defy any mother to say that she was happy to see a child go into the service during that terrible war, or that she was not relieved if the child did not go and get killed.

How do you think all the young men whose number was not called and did not serve feel when President Bush and (Vice President Quayle) call them draft dodgers?

I now have two grandsons of draft age. Neither served in the military.

After graduating from high school, one had the choice of joining the service or not. It was not mandatory. This calling of names of young men who have not served is wrong.

Some young men join the service because they can't get a job, not because they are extremely patriotic. This is a pity. Many join because they think they will be eligible for free educational benefits if they survive.

In other words, poor young men have the choice today of joining the service or working for minimum wages after school.

It is for this reason that I voted for Bush because of the stigma he is placing on young men who have not joined the service now or before.

The time to call names is when a person is drafted and fails to sign up for the draft—not before. During the Second World War, my husband was in the Navy and his father was in the Army; one was in the South Pacific and the other in Europe.

My father tried to join the Army. But the company where he worked interfered, because his job was essential to the war effort.

This concerned my dad. He was a proud man and wanted to serve. Can you imagine how men like him fell when anyone who did not put on a uniform was called a draft dodger?

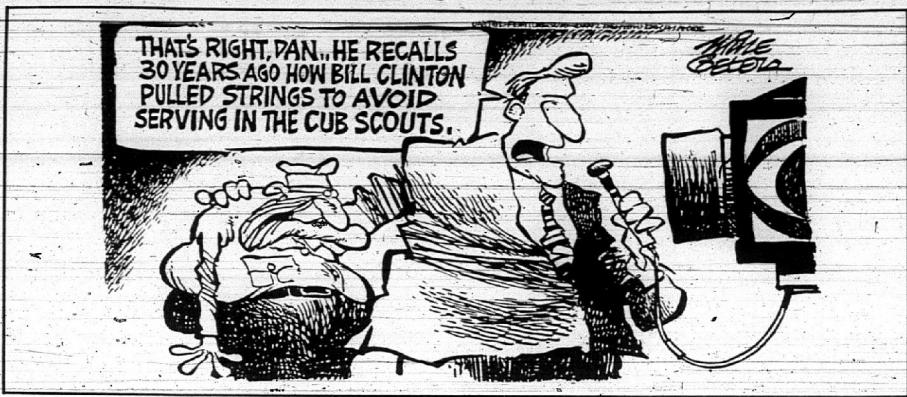

The "declaration of war" in the 1940s when Pearl Harbor was bombed.

Every man, woman and school child was more than glad to give all they had to win that war. We all sacrificed and were proud to do so.

Clinton sounds like a nice young man. He must be intelligent or would not have excelled academically or politically.

Maybe he is not perfect. I have never had the fortune to meet a perfect person.

Lakeside plan can benefit all

TO THE EDITOR:

Realizing the tremendous impact that the establishment of an airport would have on the surrounding area and restore Lakeside Airport would have on our communities, I would like to submit the following information and facts:

First of all, there is the Federal Aviation trust fund for acquisition of, and improvement on, publicly owned airports.

This fund is derived from monies collected from the per-gallon aviation fuel tax and airline ticket head taxes.

The "fund now" stands somewhere in the billions of dollars. To benefit, you receive funds from this you have to have a public airport sponsor locally, such as a city, two cities, an air-port authority, or a county.

That is a few pennies a day. You would be surprised how it will bring jobs and bring revenue. And if you look at your tax bills, it is the only thing that is revenue bearing and not a dead expense with highly questionable cost-effectiveness for services rendered.

This "money in" the Federal Trust Fund will be spent somewhere, regardless of what happens here in November. What happens here in November is what the money spent here instead of somewhere else? This will be the only bargain on the November ballot.

Airports with close-in facilities do well, and enhance businesses in the area.

Now about the cost to the taxpayers, of which I am one.

The maximum tax that could be levied is .075 percent per $100 of assessed property tax. And the maximum tax is about $12.38. This is taxes on property owners. Renters do not pay property tax.

For example: On the assessed value of a house or property of $60,000, the maximum, and I repeat maximum tax is about $12.38. This is taxes on property owners. Renters do not pay property tax.

That is a few pennies a day. You would be surprised how it will bring jobs and bring revenue. And if you look at your tax bills, it is the only thing that is revenue bearing and not a dead expense with highly questionable cost-effectiveness for services rendered.

This "money in" the Federal Trust Fund will be spent somewhere, regardless of what happens here in November. What happens here instead of somewhere else? This will be the only bargain on the November ballot.

BILLY H. GREER
Collinsville

The best way to establish a special is through the establishment of an airport authority, between local area cities.

Publicly-owned general aviation airports at Lakeside would be generated, I am sure.

Airports in the St. Louis area are a half-billion-dollar industry each year to this region. They attract business to the surrounding areas. This means jobs directly at the airport and surrounding businesses.

Chesterfield, Mo., and Bellfonte have committed to St. Louis-St. Louis Airport and St. Louis Regional Airport, respectively.

Lakeside Airport is better located and would be a boost to the immediate area. It is about three miles east and benefits from its airports generate revenue, for instance, hangar space is filled with waiting lists for space. This is a larger source of revenue. This is a special source of revenue.

Lakeside Airport is conveniently located on Illinois 111 and Horseshoe Lake Road, midway between Collinsville and Granite City, with the mid-size Collinsville Convention Center, motels, restaurants, the state police headquarters and state buildings.

It has the easiest access to both Collinsville and Granite City as well as to downtown St. Louis, such as the stadium, etc.

Lakeside Airport, since 1940 was privately owned and operated public airport, until 1965.

During that time, it had more than 100 aircraft based there, three flying schools, and at one time had the V-5 cadet training school. St. Louis Car Company built trainer airplanes and test flew them there.

The Illinois Reserve Militia Air Academy, Civil Air Patrol operated out of there. During the flood of 1946, Lakeside was dry and usable when Highway 40 at Mounds State Park had four feet of water.

The airport, today, as a privately operated strip is capable in its confines of operating single and multi-engine aircraft and a variety of approaches and lack of obstructions. It has very good potential for ease of expansion, if need be.

Fully developed, this airport could make $20 million to $30 million years for economic impact. This airport and its proximity to the Convention Center, hotels and restaurants will enhance its usage by air-travelers.

The countywide candidates said nothing. Only one took the podium, and he said nothing about his office or his position on issues relative to his office.

None of the candidates attempted to praise existing officeholders for their accomplishments, but it was obvious he knew little about their office operations.

I can only assume that the incumbents have nothing relevant to say about their performance in office. Is it possible nothing has changed since has occurred during their reign?

As someone who has always voted an informed, split ticket, I left the Bethalto homecoming without a clue as to whom any countywide Democratic candidate stands on any issue—or if their performance in office has served the voter.

You should be informed. There are intelligent people who can decide on their own who deserves their vote.

The Democratic party advocates this kind of split ticket. This is no longer an answer. The high cost of government requires qualified and responsive leadership.

Are the countywide incumbents getting the same? Are they responsive? Are they leaders?

The countywide incumbents joined the Democratic "pop rally" on Sunday evening and failed to provide any information for the "informed" voter. Will we know their performance in office by Nov. 3?

I doubt it. I'm concerned; that's why I'm a candidate. Are you concerned?

Staff to continue quality tradition

TO THE EDITOR:

To the patrons of Ralph and Charlie's Steakhouse:

We thank everyone who expressed their kindness in response to our recent loss (the recent death of our father). Thank you and to our customers who were able to patronize the restaurant throughout this trying time.

We are going to carry on the tradition of Ralph and Charlie's as Dave would have wanted. Dave once told me that his wish was for Ralph and Charlie's Steakhouse to continue at least 100 years after his passing.

As the manager, I can attest to the dedication of the staff and that they will continue to provide the quality and consistency that you have come to expect from Ralph and Charlie's.

"We want our best advertisement to be on our customer's plate." — Dave Thebeau.

We have a man who has worked with a man who not only inspired many, but sincerely improved the lives of all who were close to him.

We assure the public that Ralph and Charlie's will continue to operate in the same manner Dave always insisted upon.

Thank you for your continued support. We hope that you have done well, we look forward to seeing all of you soon and as often as possible.

Improvement in auditor methods

TO THE EDITOR:

I read your Sept. 17 editorial entitled "Politics and hiring," all the way to the end.

The editor doesn't believe it's right but he according to you hired 100 people as favors to friends anyway.

And worse yet, Mr. Partney has come up with a very rationalization of this kind of hiring as a contribution to a greater good.

Nobody is upset when the most qualified persons get jobs.

People are upset because there are many equally-qualified people put there with similar talents and the jobs are given to the dearest privileged friends and relatives of politicians.

To think that this should be acceptable to every qualified applicants, past-practice or not, legally aside, is an insult to our intelligence.

There is no substitute for honesty and fairness in the workplace. Politicians who feel other wise should take their pompous "experts" and go to town and do the city a favor for him.

There has got to be a better way to decide between equally qualified people in city and public school job openings.

Author says Lyme Disease is 'rural plague'

complete disruption of the thought process of the people suffering from the later stages of the disease.

"Here you have a doctor who is smart, who has a lot of education, up against a patient who has been sped in a complete sentence. Who's going to win in that argument? When you've got Lyme Disease, you can't even focus on what the doctor is saying, much less tell the doctor that."

Finally, Lakin said, the blood test for Lyme disease is very inaccurate, especially in the early stages of the disease. He said that of all the times he had it and through several dozen tests, his test only came back positive once.

In his book, Lakin describes his various bouts with the disease and his treatment, which included a 12-month regimen.

As an example, he describes his second infection after being bitten by ticks more than 200 times:

"I squashed (the ticks) on the picnic table and ate a sandwich in the same spot lots of times. I was scared of catching a disease then; he's still young. I'm 30. I wasn't scared to eat a sandwich without washing my hands, so when I got the pain and gouts from 5 or 6 ticks on my foot, I just sat there over my hands and fingers (and at the time I was rapidly losing my mind without noticing it). Except for I could never remember what I ate. It didn't matter if I was a doctor or not. I could sit there for three minutes or three hours. I couldn't visualize what I had eaten for breakfast, lunch or dinner. All I could figure out was I used to go to work. I always knew to myself something must be wrong with my brain."

Lakin said it is hard to describe exactly what happens to the thought process, but it is like there is a cloud or a void in the middle of the brain that thoughts have to go around and where thoughts sometimes get stuck. The book describes the disease as:

"Couldn't concentrate or remember anything; a job couldn't finish a job no matter how small it was. You forgot what you are doing even before you get started, as in what I was going to do, what I was going to eat, where I was going to go or where I did go."

Knowing antibiotics could clean it up, Lakin said he would try to manage to concentrate long enough to find a doctor. Even after much study and after gaining knowledge about Lyme Disease, Lakin said it was impossible to think well enough to convince a doctor. He said he would just keep saying "I want some tetracycline and I'm not leaving the office without it."

In his book Lakin describes the way he believes the Lyme Disease bacteria work to build a sense of unity among the group. Wiecking said:

"The kids come for various reasons," he said. "They may be new to the area, they may be feeling a little intimidated, and this may give them a booster shot."

Turned at home also creates problems for children, Wiecking said.

"The parents may be going through a divorce or a tragic time," he said. "(A program) can help them with along perhaps with some other things, to help them deal with grief and anger."

Instructors use various methods to enhance children's self-confidence. One is the IALAC demonstration. IALAC is short for "Institute for All Children," a term used in children's self-esteem programs to describe a child's feelings of self-worth and confidence.

For the demonstration, children are given a piece of paper representing their self-esteem. They walk around the room, and other children play the part of daily chores, telling the child the IALAC. By the time the child has walked around the room, the IALAC is gone.

Instructors then teach the students to keep the IALAC intact, despite the difficulties they may encounter.

Group discussions and role-playing are an integral part of the program. The instructors try

"I saw a hundred or more (of the bacteria) under a microscope magnified to a quarter of an inch long. They were screw shaped and they drilled with a swimming motion, they screwed, drilled and swam all at the same time through my body. That's how they invaded my body, these things look so deadly, the hair stood up on the back of my neck. You could tell they were invaders and they weren't the good guys."

"I could just imagine them, they are still in me. I know what they do to you because they do it to me..."

"The stronger ones are trying to drill their way through your spinal cord and nerves. It takes them longer probably because the membranes around the nerves are thicker. That is where the jitteriness comes in, them drilling bacteria are in your nervous system now. And when you have them, you feel that soft brain matter starting to cloud up your thinking process, and within a matter of months you used to be able to do are difficult now."

Lakin said he believes Lyme Disease is here to stay and quotes a report by Dr. Art Ulene on the NBC Today Show in June 1991 as saying the bacteria was still around. "I don't think it's been controlled, it might not be as effective in killing it as was once thought. Lakin quotes Ulene as saying that even with treatment some people may never get rid of the disease. He said that the diagnostic test for Lyme Disease is poor.

Although Lakin said he has been bitten by ticks thousands of times, he said it only takes a few bites to contract the disease. Lakin also said he has interviewed 10 people who have had the disease. Of those, two had only been bitten by ticks twice and one of the people had only been bitten once.

Lakin said he is a survivor and has

Children's self image: Fragile, easily damaged

(Editor's note: This is the third of a four-part series focusing on kids in the real world.)

For children, developing and maintaining high self-esteem can be a difficult task.

But a few kind words from teachers and parents can do a long way toward helping a child's self image, said Karen O'Reilly, one of the social workers for O'Fallon District 90 schools.

Kids get a lot of attention, when they do something wrong, but they often get overlooked if they do something right," O'Reilly said. "They need some positive reinforcement."

She said that by a teacher just saying, "Good morning" to a student or asking a student how he or she feels can help to boost self-esteem.

A child's self image can easily be built up or torn down, she said.

A bad grade or a few mean comments from a teacher can hurt a child's self-esteem, said Jill Mix, a social worker interning with O'Reilly.

But a teacher can restore that self-esteem just by letting children know they care, she said.

"I was telling a student the other day that her teacher had told me what a hard worker she was and how much she enjoyed having her in class," Mix said. "She just lit up. She had no idea how much her teacher liked her."

Family concerns can be a major influence on self-esteem, O'Reilly said. Children don't like divorce, custody battles, unemployment or financial difficulties. They often blame themselves for the family problems.

"Kids think 'It's my fault. If I were good or if I didn't get in trouble maybe this wouldn't be happening,'" O'Reilly said. "They need to understand that they are not to blame."

If parents sit down and talk to their children about the problems, it can help to relieve the pressure children feel over family problems.

O'Reilly's theories on self-esteem are similar to a program being implemented in Jefferson County, Colo., called "Self-Esteem Experiments."

The program is sponsored by Comtrex Inc. of Jefferson County, the county's mental health program. It is designed in elementary, middle and secondary school, said Stephen Huss, Comtrex director. The six-week program is given both at the Comtrex office and at schools, and is held once a week in the evenings, Huss said.

At the moment, the program is unique to Comtrex, Huss said. However, there are plans to expand the program to other school districts throughout the St. Louis area, and all across Missouri, he said.

Tracy Wiecking, director of Comtrex's educational services department, said the after-school program, among other things, "helps students and families uncover self-esteem, good feelings, and how to communicate effectively and teaches your peers how to communicate with their peers."

Children often need assistance to bolster their self-esteem.

to build a sense of unity among the group, Wiecking said.

Parental involvement is also important. "We try to get the family to see the school as an advocate," he said. "The idea is that the school and the family develop closeness."

Children need to learn the importance of moods in daily life, he said.

"Sometimes you set yourself up to have a bad day," he said. "If you wake up and stub your toe right away, you might think you're going to have a bad day. It could become a self-fulfilling prophecy."

But focusing on positives instead of negatives can alter a person's mood, Wiecking said. "It's important to remove as many of the filters as possible," he said.

"If they can't control everything that happens, they can control their response," he said. "It gives them power over them, gives them a sense of control. That in turn increases self-esteem."

O'Reilly said she often works with teachers to encourage students to look for the positive side of everything.

"You have to make them understand that there are a lot of things positive and negative in life so that they don't think everything hinges on one thing or one person," she said.

Seminars offered at Health Center

By Robert Raphael

Correspondent

In an effort to help all area citizens, the Mental Health Services of Southern Madison County has initiated a new series of educational seminars.

The seminars are psycho-educational in nature, meaning they are intended to be therapeutic as well as informative.

"People need trust for us," says Outpatient Services Supervisor Phyllis Whitehead.

"Instead of saying the same thing over and over to five or six individuals a day, we can get them together and just say it once."

The center will continue to offer individual counseling, Whitehead said.

"You can learn about something," she said, "but also hear information about what they can do to change their lives."

Besides Whitehead, the Mental Health Services office is manned by a group of seven other therapists.

One of these, Dr. Howard Rogers, says that quite often, people do not need to be seen in individual therapy, or for long periods of time.

"Therefore, lots of people can profit from a class that is co-educational," said Rogers, who is the clinical director at the center.

"In fact, some people prefer that method." This idea has been the genesis of our psycho-education movement, he said, to meet some community needs.

The list of seminars, both ongoing and future, ranges from stress management and self-esteem development to how incest affects women.

Kathleen "Marshall," whose work at MHS involves a mixture of adults, families and children, said that she, who joins the groups in the middle of a course can easily fit in.

"The classes are open-ended," she said, "you can come in on the end of the day, drop in, for example and pick it up at the beginning of the nighttime class."

All of the staff members agreed that the purpose of the seminars was to tell the public that their counseling services are for all people, not just those who are chronically ill.

"We think that we are a working agency," said Emily Weir, who specializes in counseling children, adolescents, and women at the center.

"When people come here, sometimes we see others who might not look normal to them. But we try to let them know that we are here to serve them, too."

Whitehead said that those who decide to take advantage of these services are charged a nominal fee, ranging from $5 to $70. "They tell us what their family income is, and we will charge them accordingly," she said.

"We do not provide free services," said Dr. Rogers, but we provide affordable services. There is nowhere else one can go to receive psycho-therapy for $5 or $10."

The staff members said that, since they are a non-profit private organization, they have a lack of funds. Medical cards are not accepted at MHS, but some outpatient insurance programs may cover these services.

In 1991, the Granite City office conducted more than 800 clients, with total visits of close to 10,000.

The average client comes for about six to 10 visits, Dr. Rogers said. People think that therapy is a long-term process, but today it is relatively short.

These seminar groups will handle many of the problems that we all face everyday.

People should call us first and discuss their problems and possibly set up an appointment," Fischer said.

We can do classes of any kind. If there is a demand, we can probably get together a class to deal with it.

In fact, we may already know that, we just haven't organized it yet."

Although most people call to set up their own appointment, other people can be referred to the center by such agencies as Family Services or Foster Services.

"I happen to be the time, Marsha said. "We have received referrals from school and law enforcement officials, as well."

"Something is to be wary of, though," Dr. Rogers said. "People ask, 'Can you help me?' We would hope that they would call on their own before they get too bad."

Information on the seminars can be obtained by calling Mental Health Services at 877-4320. The Granite City office is located at 2024 State St.

People should call or come in right away, said Whitehead.

"And we will talk to them and advise them on which classes they might attend."

Red Cross renews appeal for help for hurricane victims

Asking people to "continue the outpouring of good will," American Red Cross President Elizabeth Dole has appealed to the American public for financial contributions. Dole said Hurricane Andrew relief costs will exceed $65 million.

"Hurricane Andrew is the most massive relief effort in Red Cross history," Dole said. "The challenge is awesome. It's hard to absent its scope." "We'll need to raise more than $65 million to pay for the shelter, the food and the financial assistance these people desperately need. We are counting on the American people to continue the outpouring of good will."

Dole said 110,000 homes were damaged or destroyed in Florida, Louisiana, and other Gulf states. Red Cross damage assessment teams have canvassed disaster areas in Florida, Georgia, Texas and Mississippi house-by-house, block-by-block.

Preliminary damage assessments have identified more than 97,000 homes in Florida, Louisiana and 14,000 in the Gulf states that were damaged or destroyed by Hurricane Andrew.

Red Cross emergency shelters have been set up in the wake of Hurricane Andrew. In addition, the American Red Cross Chapter of the Tri-City Chapter of the American Red Cross is trying to raise $14,000 for the disaster relief fund. More than $10,000 has been received from churches, schools, businesses and private donors in the local area.

People wishing to donate to help the victims of Hurricane Andrew and other disasters may make a financial contribution to the American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund and send it to the American Red Cross, Tri-City Chapter, 1000 Brook Road, Granite City, IL 62040.

Donations may also be charged to a credit card by calling 1-800-842-2200.

Florida and Louisiana. Since the hurricane struck Aug. 23, the Red Cross has served more than 21,000 meals and served 10,000 victims and relief workers.

Dole said the generosity of Americans contributing to the Red Cross disaster relief fund has been overwhelming.

An estimated $47 million has been contributed or pledged during recent weeks. The Red Cross' toll free 800 telephone number received more than 100,000 calls from President George Bush after his public address on Sept. 1. In less than 24 hours, more than 33,000 callers responded to his plea for help for disaster victims, donating $4 million to the Red Cross disaster relief fund. Thousands of calls continue to be received.

Dole presented contributions that have exceeded $1 of $1 million or more to the relief fund, including the Anheuser-Busch Charitable Foundation, the Anheuser-Busch Foundation, Humanes Inc., Knights of Columbus, Kresge Foundation and Winn Dixie.

In addition, P.T. DuPont De Nemours and Co. has assisted in the development of innovative warehousing and transportation system, making it possible for the Red Cross to store and distribute the huge quantities of supplies that have been donated from around the country.

Dole also expressed special thanks to Dr. Roy Vagelos, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Merck and Co., Inc., and chairman of the Red Cross disaster relief fund campaign cabinet. Vagelos leads a team of 19 CEOs who have pledged generous gifts to the disaster fund and are recruiting their peers to join in the effort.

An unprecedented gift of $10 million from the government of Kuwait to the American Red Cross fund was made on Sept. 2. "The generosity of the government of Kuwait during a time of such great need is remarkable," Dole said.

"On behalf of thousands of disaster victims, our heartfelt thanks go to Kuwait for its extraordinary act of kindness. This gift will help us to meet the needs of people to get back on their feet."

The Red Cross' current financial needs to meet the costs of Hurricane Andrew and other major disasters such as Hurricane Omar that have occurred this year are estimated to be $100 million.

Before Hurricane Andrew struck, the Red Cross had already launched an appeal for $30 million after depicting its disaster fund helping thousands of victims struck by an unprecedented number of major disasters in 1991.

In the local area, the Tri-City Chapter of the American Red Cross is trying to raise $14,000 for the disaster relief fund. More than $10,000 has been received from churches, schools, businesses and private donors in the community.

People wishing to donate to help the victims of Hurricane Andrew and other disasters may make a financial contribution to the American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund and send it to the American Red Cross, Tri-City Chapter, 1000 Brook Road, Granite City, IL 62040.

Donations may also be charged to a credit card by calling 1-800-842-2200.

He said the state is providing the necessary software for the system.

Madison Police Chief Charles Bridges applied for and received a grant of about $6,000 to update computer equipment about a year ago, when he learned the new standards would be required.

If other departments are getting along with this, why shouldn't we?" Candler asked.

Police departments throughout the state have long been required to report crime statistics at the state level, and where an offense occurred, case status and the nature of any property involved to the state.

While there were 16 major departments in the past three times as much information must now be provided, May, computer specialist at the Granite City Police Department, said.

Among the new information to be reported for every offense:

• circumstances surrounding the incident, such as "argument" or "drug dealing";

• weapons used — everything from "pretend weapon" to "handgun";

• hate or bias displayed by the offender, such as "anti-white," "anti-heterosexual" or "anti-physical handicapped";

• gang affiliations of those involved;

• details of any injuries sustained in the incident;

• status of any property lost, such as "burned" or "counter-forged";

• whether or not the crime was drug, alcohol or computer-related;

• 12 classifications of drug types, their quantities and approximate value;

• the nature of the victim, such as "business" or "police officer";

• the relationship between the victim and the offender, such as "acquaintance" or "spouse";

• weather and lighting conditions at the scene;

• the sex, age, race, resident status and gang type of the victim, offender and/or arrestee, and nature of any injuries sustained in the incident.

Officers must complete all the information for every offense from bicycle theft to telephone harassment to arson.

May said that the new reporting standards will cost the city money, time and manpower, but that they must be done.

King said the failure to report the additional information is considered a misdemeanor on the part of the police chief.

Not only must the city purchase new computer equipment to be able to store, retrieve and send the additional information, but May estimated that it could take three to four days for officers to fill out the new report and for a clerk to enter the data into a computer.

Candler pointed out that Knight's request has been reduced to $15,000 from the $40,000 he unsuccessfully asked the Finance Committee to allocate earlier this year.

Candler said more research into the matter is necessary before the City Council allocates the funds.

Thomas Clemons

James Clemons, 80, of Bakersfield, Calif., formerly of Madison, died Tuesday, Sept. 29, 1992, at his residence.

Mr. Clemons was born in Grand Chico, Ill. He was a retired builder and professional painter.

Survivors include five brothers, Burton, Harold, Luke and Paul, and Clemons of Riverside, Calif.; two sisters; Elizabeth Pruitt of Bakersfield; and Alma Ruth Butler of Flint, Mich.; and a cousin, Helen King of Bakersfield.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Izah and Ella (Cowan) Clemons, and one brother, Arland Clemons.

There will be no visitation. Private services will be held. Mr. Clemons' remains will be cremated and rites will be observed. Burial will be in Bakersfield.

There is no difference in people, he said. "The skin color, black people want the same things as any other people."

If you look at the black population, you will find the same things as white people. There are whites in the Ku Klux Klan, there are blacks in the nationalist movement, and the same is true for whites and blacks across the whole spectrum.

"Skin color is superficial. It doesn't define what a person is. No person's wants, hopes and dreams are determined by skin color."

Past practices that forced segregation cost Madison dearly, Garrett said.

"Banks with good jobs, places that made them middle class, moved out of Madison," Garrett said. "Most of them didn't want to leave and would have stayed if they'd been allowed to purchase homes in middle-class neighborhoods."

"We could have had strong black middle-class homeowners. We could have been a very stable area, we could have had the talents of those people working in the community, but institutional segregation kept that from happening."

Both Bellcoff and Garrett said they view ethnic diversity as a strength in a community, and that they are looking for and working toward a Madison that will make the best use of the talents and contributions of all its citizens.

"I've always disliked the term African-American, just as I've disliked all other hyphenated American names," Garrett said. "I'd rather have pride in one's race, rather than the race. I don't believe in putting the race before being an American."

"If everybody was just an American, I think we'd all be better off."

because of its size.

However, Levy said that Metra East Airport, after suffering the loss of its deal with the St. Jacob area, one of the things so attractive about that airport is its location.

"The location is much more favorable," Levy said. "There is better access than the Granite City site for most of our students."

One drawback to the airport is that it does not have a control tower.

Trustee Ted Farmer said he would not support a move to an airport that did not include use of a control tower as part of the package deal.

•Voters

The last day to request an absentee ballot to be mailed is Oct. 29. The last day to cast an absentee ballot in person is Nov. 2.

Next Monday is the last day to register for the Nov. 3 election.

Delaney said usually 2,000 to 3,000 people register each year to vote in the Nov. 3 election. He already tripled that figure, and he said it still nearly a week left to sign up. She attributed the increase to the presidential election.

Objectives of the "Pro Tour '92" Leadership Skills Training for Business Professionals, a 16-hour leadership skills training retreat for front-line managers, will bring a top-flight group of speakers to Bellcoff Area College.

Guest speakers will be James F. Allsup, president, Allsup Inc.; Harold Barron, president, president, Allsup Personnel Services; Benjamin F. Edwards III, president, chairman and chief executive officer, A.G. Edwards and Sons Inc.; and Richard C. Ward, president, Development Strategies Inc.

Although some individuals contend that proposed EPA regulations could cut the potential ethanol market by up to 35 percent, Madigan insisted it could not be quantified specifically.

Illinois is the nation's largest ethanol producer, and it has been estimated that the industry is responsible for adding at least 10 cents per bushel to the price of corn, he said.

"We'll compare this year to 1988, because it was extremely busy," Delaney said. "There wasn't much interest in the 1988 general election."

Experts believe if bad economy heightens voter participation, said John Farrell, a political science professor at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville.

Farrell said voter turnout was up in 1982 and 1984 when the nation's economy was struggling.

"There's conflicting evidence as to what effect a poor economy has on people participating," he said. "It's at least a possibility."

Farrell said the level of discontent seems to be higher this year than in other recent times of economic difficulty.

The independent candidacy of Tomas Billings Jr. of Rose Ferrell may also be having some effect, he said.

Delaney agreed in general.

"The political history setting because of (independent candidate Ross) Perot's involvement, but the interest was tremendous even before that," she said.

Farrell noted the third-party presidential candidacy of Gov. George Wallace brought more people into the political process in 1968, but the independent presidential bid of John Anderson appeared to have no impact on participation in the 1980 election.

Specific figures were not available, but voter turnout at Bellcoff's offices also reported normal to heavier-than-usual registration.

Voters may register at county clerks' offices and at many polling places throughout the area. In addition, many precinct committee men are deputy registrars.

"This story was compiled from information supplied by Staff Writer Bonita Tillman and the Alton Telegraph."

American Legion Unit 307 membership dinner Monday

Venice Madison Unit 307 of the American Legion Auxiliary held its meeting on Sept. 14 at the Post 307 Home in Venice.

Karen Schiebelle was hostess chairman for lunch; 32 members were present.

The business meeting was conducted by Louise M. Young, president. Betty L. Fink, Auxiliary Fund chairman, collected $16.15 for the fund.

Kate Buechel, Americanism chairman, stressed that everyone must be a member. Some discussion was held regarding changing of address and absentee voting.

A report was made on monthly bingo held at Connie's Haven, North Home and at the Colonades Nursing Home.

The annual membership dinner will be held at 6:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 5. This will be a pot-luck meal.

Norma Hillmer, Membership chairman, reported having sent 121 dues to department and working on the rest needed.

Releke's Holiday Harvest this weekend

Holiday Harvest at Releke Farms on Sand Prairie Road will be held from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

The event will feature hayrides, a petting zoo, craft booths, food and entertainment. Pumpkins and other fall vegetables will be for sale.

Bush may OK ethanol as fuel

SPRINGFIELD — U.S. Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan says President Bush is close to making a favorable decision on ethanol.

"I feel confident as soon as the president is able to go with this, he will go with what the ethanol people want," Madigan added in a Springfield visit Monday.

Bush has been under attack for more than a month from Corn Belt interests because of a preliminary determination by U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Administrator William Ruckelshaus that the corn-based fuel cannot be used in summer months in the nation's major metropolitan areas, including Chicago.

The agriculture secretary, a former Illinois congressman and booster of ethanol, said it would do no good for the president to "simply overturn" the agency's documentation has been developed that would withstand a field, said in a later news conference Monday that the Clean Air Act already provided for ethanol and that it could be used year-round everywhere and not violate the tougher anti-pollution standards in the new federal standards.

Madigan said he hoped Bush would have an announcement on ethanol before the election, but said he could not name a specific date.

He also contended that Bush has been more supportive of ethanol than Democratic presidential candidate William Clinton, who had quoted a statement attributed to Clinton, Massachusetts, in which the Arkansas governor appeared to say he would not push for ethanol use in populated areas.

House Energy and Commerce Committee chairman, Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Springfield, said he was optimistic that the president would support ethanol.

Refineries to make the system easier to use are being considered, Madigan said, adding that it will help out whenever needed.

Any one who wants to view any money transactions the county has made should contact the court's office and schedule a time.

"I have always emphasized innovation and I believe in openness to the public. There should never be any question as to what the county's office is doing," Madigan said.

He also said he will provide information without wasteful and unnecessary expense," he said.

This is good news for everyone in Madison County, he said, adding that his office apparently did have some effect on Bathon offering the service.

"He wasn't there before I started running," he said.

Bathon said his staff and the county's Data Processing Department have been working to get the public access terminal for several weeks.

Bucherich's goal edges Kahoks

Cooper gains shutout as kickers maintain hold over SWC

By David Wilhelm
Staff writer

At this point in the soccer season, it's unusual to see Collinsville and Granite City with a combined eight losses. The teams had a total of seven all of last year.

"I think it's going to be that kind of year for everybody," said Warrior coach Gene Baker. "There's a great deal of parity throughout the whole area."

During Tuesday's second meeting of the season between the two teams, Collinsville was looking to erase the bad memories of a 3-1 loss at Granite City on Sept. 1.

Warriors, meanwhile, were hoping to score at least one goal. They hadn't accomplished that in three games and were feeling after a recent five-game winless span that included three ties.

But they didn't have to wait long against the Kahoks, as sophomore Paulie Bucherich scored his first goal of the season just 16½ minutes into the game, providing the only offense Granite City (7-3-3) needed in a 1-0 victory.

"This is a game we could have gone either way, but they came out on top," said Kahoks coach Ron Rowden.

Former Collinsville goalkeeper Cory Cooper gained his third shutout for Granite City, which improved its record in the Southwestern Conference to 4-0-1. The Warriors are 28-0-3 in their last 31 SWC games. They will celebrate the fifth anniversary of their last conference loss tonight when they host Belleville East. The Lancers beat Granite City 2-1 on Oct. 1, 1982.

Baker didn't think revenge was on the mind of Cooper, who transferred from Collinsville to Granite City last summer. Cooper hasn't allowed a goal this season.

"He's not that kind of kid," said Baker. "He's into vengeance. He has nothing but praise for his former team and the town."

"Cory was good in goal. Cory played very well. He was very stable, to say the least."

Rowden said the Kahoks (5-5 overall, 3-2 in the SWC) didn't execute well enough on offense to apply pressure on Cooper.

"He didn't own the ball, but he didn't test him on restarts," said Rowden. "We missed on six (restart) opportunities. After giving them six balls, we played very well except for our restarts."

"We're at 500. I'm happy with that right now except for two games — Edwardsville (a 2-1 loss in two overtimes) and St. Louis (a 1-0 loss at the CYO Tournament).

At 16:28, Bucherich — in a crowd in front of the Kahoks' net — was able to get to the ball inside the box and hit a shot that hit the left corner of the goal. The crowd, several Collinsville players, including goalie Clay Hunter, sophomore John Nizinski, got the assist.

"We had about four chances to clear

Don Harris isn't offering any fancy statements. After all, what can his team do other than just play ball?

Harris and his players know there aren't a handful of high school football teams anywhere in the country with as tough a task as the Warriors face this week. Granite City (1-3), fresh off its first win of the year, will play in Collinsville, return home for a 7:30 p.m. game Friday against the East St. Louis Flyers.

The game will be broadcast live on WGN-AM (960 AM).

The Flyers are 3-1, but the loss was a forfeit due to a teachers strike three weeks ago. The three wins have come by an average score of 45-9, they are ranked first in the Journal poll, first in the state Class 6A poll and in the top 10 in several national polls.

"They do everything well," said Harris, who couldn't pinpoint a single weakness on Bob Shannon's team. "They're big and quick, their special teams are excellent and their offensive line is fun to watch."

Fun to watch when they're playing, fun to compete against at times. "That line just wears them down," said Harris. "They have played some good teams this year, but it hasn't made much difference. (Shannon) has said it's the best line he's had, but it's hard to compare one great East St. Louis team to another."

Golfers finish 20-4; SWC, regional next

The Warriors golfers ended the regular season with their 20th win Tuesday, but it could have been better.

Granite City, which had been 18-0 in the 1500s and set a school record with a 143 last Thursday, went up to 161 Tuesday at Wood River's Belk Park. That was enough to beat the host Oilers (7-11), but it was 18 strokes behind the Edwardsville Tigers.

The Warriors are 20-4 on the season, with two of the losses coming to Edwardsville.

Matt Ruder led the Warriors Tuesday with a 40. Gabe Mitchell and Ken Feltz both shot 41s. Dan Poteet and Steve Rains all shooting 42s. Steve Hyten and Mike Suhre led Edwardsville with 37s.

Granite City is competing in the Southwestern Conference. The team will play in Alton, then will shoot in the Mascoutah Tournament on Saturday to tune up for the regional.

Spikers improve to 4-4 after handling Kahoks

By Brian Henry
Correspondent

Granite City and Collinsville have different football programs going in different directions.

The Warriors have one of their most experienced teams in recent years while the Kahoks are trying to rebuild their team with a youthful talent base.

Experience won Tuesday at Memorial Gymnasium as the Warriors evened their record at 4-4 (3-2 in the Southwestern Conference) with a 15-2, 15-6 victory over the Kahoks (1-3, 2-4).

The Warriors wasted little time in taking the first game. Buoyed by Staci Johnson's 10 straight service points, Granite City needed only 13 minutes to win, 15-2.

Rugged Dupo next up for winless Trojans

By Mike Kelly
Staff writer

It's been a learning year for the Dupo Tigers and Gary Mauer.

Now, for his sideline outbursts, the Dupo football coach has toned down his act this season. Apparently, being patient is starting to pay off. Following a pair of one-point losses, the Tigers (2-2) are riding a three-game winning streak, heading into Friday's 7:30 p.m. game in Madison.

"It's been a learning year on opening night against Berkel to 13 points in the last three games to date," said Mauer. "They committed seven turnovers against Bremen Central last Friday, a game the said. "Madison has outstanding speed. We have to contain them well if we're going to be successful this year."

The Trojans haven't beaten Dupo since 1987 (22-20) and haven't scored on them since 1988. With Dupo's defense playing like it has the last three weeks, another shutout seems very possible.

"Dupo is Dupo," Jiles said. "They're one of the only schools on our schedule that matches up with us size-wise." Dupo has 240 students to Madison's 240. And they're one of the best programs in the state among schools their size. (Chris) Chism moved to Bremen Central last year.

"But our kids aren't going to change," Madison coach Mark Jiles said. "They're going to play football. We just have to be patient. We got off to a slow start last season and went through a streak similar to this. So we're right where we were last year."

The Trojans finished the season with a two-game winning streak and racked up 82 points in the process.

"We got better each week and finished the season in strong fashion," Jiles said. "I'm confident we can do the same thing this year."

The Warriors, meanwhile, made four interceptions in shutting down Collinsville 19-0 last Friday.

"The defensive backs went to the football and made big plays," said Harris. "Our defense came together well. Mark Brakow had another great game on the line. We made their quarterback throw under pressure and it paid off."

"It's been a learning year for us this week," Flyer quarterback Ben Williams has been able to throw with success, but there is often little need for East Side to throw.

"Their fullback (Darren Suggs) is big and tough," said Harris. "And they lose Chris Moore, (Mike) Haywood starts right in. He's been a good player on Moore last year. You couldn't stop him, but you knew he was getting the ball. They control you from every direction this year."

The Flyer legend grows. Kevin Horrigan's book, "The Right Kind of Heroes," is in bookstores throughout the country telling of Sherron's success. It keeps the Flyers focused each week.

"People play as hard all the time," said Shannon. "Look what (Belleville) West did last week. We didn't play very well in the first half and they were in the game City with us yesterday."

"The Warriors have often been ready for the Flyers. One magical day, they were as ready as could be."

"Nineteen eighty-six," Shannon said. "That game is a constant reminder for our players every year."

The Warriors were also ready, bating the Flyers toe-to-toe at Clyde Jordan Stadium before losing 31-19. Then in the second meeting, the Warriors were like the one in 1990, when the Warriors were in 49 and brought them right back to Darnell's hard shot, preserving the tie.

Senior Derek Cooper sent a pass to Darnell at 56:02, but C. Cooper's intended good save on Darnell's header, Senior Tino Galvan had a similar opportunity for Collinsville at 64:07, but his header sailed high.

the ball," said Rowden. "Then all of a sudden he popped it in for a goal. The Buderich kid did well for us yesterday."

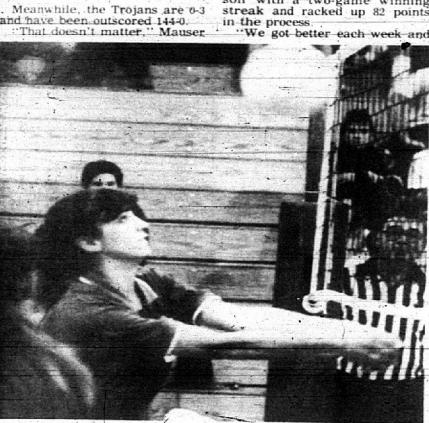

Baker said: "Paulie had a big game, and (senior) Bobby Vincent was a key because we could make (senior) Jason Maxfield to defend. We were hoping to have (Brent) Dippel at full strength so we could have Maxfield up front where he belongs."

Military

Eric Slover

Eric P. Slover received practical work in military leadership at ROTC advanced camp at Fort Lewis, Tacoma, Wash.

The camp, attended by cadets normally between their third and fourth year of college, includes instruction in communications, management and survival training to his present rank.

During the training cycle at Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, recruits are taught the basics of battlefield survival, introduced to typical military daily routine and personal and professional standards.

All recruits participate in an active physical conditioning program and gain proficiency in a variety of military skills, including first aid, rifle marksmanship and close-order drill. Teamwork and self-discipline are emphasized throughout the cycle.

The 1992 graduate of Granite City Senior High School, Granite City, joined the Marine Corps in June 1992.

Chad Nowakski

Marine PFC Chad Nowakski, nephew of John E. Davis of Granite City, recently completed recruit training and was promoted to his present rank.

During the training cycle at Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, recruits are taught the basics of battlefield survival, introduced to typical military daily routine and personal and professional standards.

All recruits participate in an active physical conditioning program and gain proficiency in a variety of military skills, including first aid, rifle marksmanship and close-order drill. Teamwork and self-discipline are emphasized throughout the cycle.

The 1992 graduate of Granite City Senior High School, Granite City, joined the Marine Corps in June 1992.

Briefly

Student to study in London

Roger Schrenk of Granite City is studying in London this fall semester.

Schrenk, a junior at Rosary College, is enrolled in the college's London program. He is a graduate of Marquette High School.

In London, Rosary College students take an independent study or research project, plus a required interdisciplinary studies course, British Life and Culture.

The program also includes a 10-day study tour of England and Scotland and weekly day trips to historical sites like Cambridge, Canterbury and Stonehenge.

Student teaching in Missouri

Linda L. Whited, daughter of Janice Boyd of Granite City, is preparing for her career in education by student teaching second graders at Daniel Young Elementary in Blue Springs, Mo.

Student teaching is a requirement of Central Missouri State University students who are pursuing degrees in education both at the elementary and secondary levels.

Whited, who plans to graduate from Central in December 1992, is a 1970 graduate of Granite City High School.

Workshop for parents

A workshop for parents who are interested in helping their children succeed in school will be held at St. Elizabeth Parish, 2301 Pontoon Road in Granite City, on Wednesday, Oct. 28, from 7 to 9 p.m. in the cafeteria.

"Homework Without Tears" is the newest program offered by Lee Carter and Associates. Carter is well-known throughout the United States for his practical and effective Assertive Discipline program. Using many of the skill and techniques of Assertive Discipline, Homework Without Tears will present parents with the opportunity to learn step-by-step guidelines that solve homework problems and guarantee to improve their child's success in school.

The workshop leader will be Debra Peppers. The fee to attend this workshop is a free will offering. Homework Without Tears books will be available for sale. Pre-registration is recommended. For further information contact the Rev. Robert L. DeGrand at 931-2916.

Former kings, queens sought

The Granite City High School Student Council is hoping to have all former homecoming kings and queens to participate in the 1992 Homecoming parade.

The parade will be held on Oct. 16 at 6 p.m. It will begin in the downtown Magna Bank parking lot, go down Niedringhaus and Madison Avenue and will end in the high school parking lot. If you are interested, please contact Steve Hamilton at 451-5808/288-5059 or Jennifer Sippert at 451-7288 by Oct. 7.

Student chosen for choir

Nicole Schneider, a junior from Granite City, is among the 61 Culver-Stockton College students who have been chosen by audition to members of the 1992-93 C-Section Choir.

The Concert Choir, directed by D. Larry McSpadden, associate professor of music, performs selections from a repertoire of choral masterpieces from the Renaissance to the 20th century.

Concert Choir students present several annual, formal concerts and perform at college functions. They also travel throughout the U.S., performing in high schools and giving evening concerts, on their annual spring choir tour.

It appears that President George Bush may finally agree to a debate with Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton. Bush has been in recent indictment as Bush's initial refusal to debate Clinton under a "pact" of media types ask the question.

Bush has sneered at Clinton's preference for what is described as "Oxford-style" debates featuring a face-to-face confrontation. Given that Bush clearly wants to dilute the intensity of any direct exchange between the candidates, we are left with the clear conclusion that Bush feels that including the media only can help him.

That is particularly ironic when we remember that every Republican candidate worth mentioning has criticized the media since the glory days of Spiro Agnew.

So, what would Bush do if some of the more liberal media around? Well, from here, it seems as if he knows as we all probably do — that the reporters would stomp over each other in their haste to ask their own special questions, and, as a result, any serious chance for follow-up and in-depth treatment of any subject would be truncated.

It is also likely that questions about core issues would largely be ignored — as they have been in this far-fetched campaign. The "h-e-a-d-said" questions about past behavior on both sides.

Thus, discussion about visions for the future would instead, handily avoid hairy history. And whatever the voters could learn about the plans of the candidates for the next four years largely would be the platitudes and sound bites we already have heard.

On the other hand, a one-on-one debate would allow either participant to call out the other on matters of fact and opinion, and also would allow the candidates to set the agenda within prescribed limits. Such a framework, of course, only could enhance our understanding of the men.

It's ironic that including media representatives in the debates probably would inhibit the flow of information. ***

The block of sports programming presented by KSDR-TV, which began at 10:15 p.m. on Sunday, continues to be a critical success. For the uninitiated, it begins with an expanded sports touch on the day's sports events, followed by a review of the week and a feature. The program, hosted by sports director Mike Bush, then evolves into a half-hour block of highlights directed to a panel of sports reporters.

Bush used a studio audience to generate questions for a couple of weeks, but that experiment was buried quickly. The called-in questions usually are fairly predictable, but they do provide an opportunity for reporters with some original insights to offer opinions. There generally ensues some highly opinionated, sometimes thoughtful debate, as each argues. But it's lively.

Incidentally, a recent Sunday night sportscast included a feature on Lexington, Ky., high school basketball players who are reportedly hot prospects by University of Missouri recruiters.

The report was produced by Frank Cusamano, a St. Louis native, who toils for WLEX-TV in Lexington.

Cusamano has a special touch with sports features, culting through the cliches to come up with a highly personal look at the sports. His work has appeared from time to time on ESPN and on NBC's "Sportsworld" features. Lexington is lucky to have him.

Hawkeye (Daniel Day-Lewis), a frontiersman raised by a Mohican chief, falls in love with Cora Munro (Madeleine Stowe), an English officer's daughter, in 'The Last of the Mohicans.'

'Mohicans' tells tale with sweep, sensitivity

By Harry Hamm
Correspondent

In a year seriously lacking in award-winning films, Michael Mann's "The Last of the Mohicans" looks to be 1992's first serious Academy Award contender.

A liberalized retelling of the James Fenimore Cooper novel of the same name, "The Last of the Mohicans" succeeds not only as an historical work of great color and authenticity. But more importantly, it is a moving and patriotic story of madness, patriotism, beauty and love.

If the picture has a fault, I think it is that at less than two hours' running time, it is too short. However, if it means more people will see the film, all the better.

Academy Award-winner Daniel Day-Lewis stars as Hawkeye, a frontiersman who is the adopted son of a Mohican named Chingachgook, played by Russell Means. He is wed to a strong-willed English officer, Cora Munro, daughter of an English officer. She and her sister come under the care of Hawkeye and Chingachgook when their parents die.

"The Last of the Mohicans" has great sweep on top of its personal centers. It is a compelling story of madness, patriotism, beauty and love.

You will want to put it on your "must see" list for 1992.

Rated R (Violence). Running time: 111 minutes.
